Hayes for Congress

Hon. E. A. Hayes is making calls about town today renewing old friendships and making new ones. Mr. Hayes is asking the support of his friends for renomination at the primaries. He has held the office for some time and has done a great deal for his district during his incumbency and feels justified, on his past record, in asking to be returned to that honorable body. On the theory that the "older a man is in that position, the more he can do for his district," Mr. Hayes will be in a better position to serve his constituents than a new man on the job.

Mr. Hazen Here

Mr. Edward Hazen of Los Gatos was in town this morning in the interests of his campaign for Assemblyman from this district. His announcement card appears elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Hazen was born and reared in this district and feels that he understands its needs and can do much for it in the Assembly. In his visits about the district he has met with every encouragement and is confident of his nomination at the primaries in September. He is in the drug business having been in the local drug store at one time and has many friends in this vicinity.

1,050,000 Eggs Yearly

That Santa Clara county is rapidly becoming a dominating factor in the poultry world is evidenced by the report of the Santa Clara County Poultry association yesterday that 1,050,000 eggs were shipped from this valley last year. The association is planning to begin a campaign of advertising to bring the true facts of the poultry industry in this valley before the people of the world.

An egg exchange, by which all of the eggs laid here will be tested and marketed by a common central agency is now being planned For this purpose the association intends to form a $25,000 corporation, the capital to be furnished by local poultrymen, none of whom would hold more than ten shares each, representing an investment of $100.

Cecil Kennedy, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Kennedy, was operated upon at Belvedre hospital Monday morning. The case has developed into typhoid fever and at last report the lad was resting as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

A. B. Chamberlin and family expect to move into San Jose soon to make it more convenient for Mr. Chamberlin who is working for the Bean Spray Pump Co. Mrs. Calista Atkinson and daughter of Capitola will occupy the house where Mr. Chamberlin now lives.

Odd Fellows Home Will Soon Be Ready

The splendid new Odd Fellows Home near this city will be completed within the next ten days or two weeks, and the cleaning up and furnishing will then be done, and it is expected that all will be in readiness for occupancy about the middle of September. There are already many donations of fine furniture, etc., offered by friends of this great institution in the United States.

Arrangements are in preparation for the removal of the inmates from the old Home at Thermalito to Los Gatos, and in this work the railroads are showing the generous side of their character; from Thermalito to Stockton the Western Pacific will transport the aged Odd Fellows free of charge, and from Stockton to Congress Junction the Southern Pacific will do the same. At Stockton the party will be served with a good dinner and a boat ride, and on arrival at Congress Junction members of the Order in this county will be on hand with automobiles to carry the inmates to their splendid new home. The transfer will be all made in one day, and will doubtless be fatiguing to the old gentlemen, but they are all anticipating the change with considerable pleasure; so far as location, climate, scenic surroundings, etc., are concerned they cannot be disappointed.—Los Gatos Mail.

Scotch Story

A Scotch story is that of a diminutive drummer in a local brass band, who was in the habit when out parading with his comrades of walking by sound and not by sight, owing to his drum being so high that he could not see over it. The band, on Saturday afternoons, paraded usually in one direction, but the other day the leader thought he would change the route a little, and turned down a by-street. The drummer, unaware of this movement, kept on his accustomed way, drumming as hard as ever he could. By and by, after finishing his part, and not hearing the others, he stopped, and, pushing his drum to one side, he looked to see what was the matter. His astonishment may be imagined at finding that he was alone. "Hae!" he cried to some bystanders, 'has ony o' ye seen a band hereaboot?" (Let not the question be applied to Campbell.)

Athletic Field

The Mount Hermon Association is planning a municipal playground for next season, and it is probable that Dad Moulton and H. W. Maloney will have charge. There will be several classes started.

The proposed playground will be different in many respects from the ordinary playground. Jumping pits will be installed, among other things. It will be designed especially for boys and young men who wish athletic training.

Dad and Mr. Maloney will give special attention to high school boys who want to get in trim for their school meets, and they also hope to interest the cleancut and most promising fellows in the idea of entering Stanford University. Mount Hermon is about twenty minutes away from Santa Cruz, and undoubtedly a large number of boys will accept the playgrounds with enthusiasm.

Octogenarian Deceased

William Nelson Caldwell passed away Saturday morning after a prolonged illness.

Mr. Caldwell was born in Butter county, Ohio, Jan. 30, 1831, being eighty-one years, six months old at his death. He was married in 1854 to Martha Ann Baker and was the father of three children, two daughters and a son. In 1892, he moved to California and has since been an orchardist most of the time, being one of the most highly respected citizens of the vicinity.

The funeral was held from the house Sunday afternoon, Rev. Wilson officiating, and interment was made at the Los Gatos cemetery beside his wife who died five years ago.

Music was furnished by Mesdames J. F. Wilson and J. E. Palmer and Rev. Davison and Mr. Palmer.

The deceased is survived by his three children, Mrs. McGee, Miss Caldwell and G. W. Caldwell who resides in Ventura county and was unable to attend the funeral.

TRANSCONTINENTAL FREIGHT

The new transcontinental freight tariffs have been completed. The eastbound rates will become effective August 19 and the westbound tariff will go into effect on the second day of September. The fact that all commodities that move to a very limited extent in less than carload lots, and such commodities as do not move at all have been removed from the commodity tariff, has been seized upon to make it appear that the railroads have increased their rates. Nothing could be further from the truth.

In brief, all western tariffs have been revised; the dead wood has been thrown out and the tariffs constructed on as nearly a scientific basis as is possible, consistent with the amended Interstate Commerce Act and the rules of the Commission.

Much has been said to the effect that the railronds, in order to preserve their reveaues, have deliberately raised rates on eastbound California products to such an extent that Pacitic Coast jobbers will have to go out of business. Such statements are the result of lack of proper knowledge of the tariff itself and are furthermore founded on the extremely fallacious assumption that the proper and expedient way for a railroad to preserve its revenues is to hamper the activities of the shipping public.

The truth is that in no instance have the carload rates been raised on California commodities. Furthermore, in order to simplify the tariffs and do away with the never-ending source of irritation resulting from over burdened commodity tariffs, all commodities that move to a very limited extent in less than carload lots, and such commodities as do not move at all, have been removed from the commodity tariffs and placed under the general class tariffs, where they properly belong.

In fact, on a number of commodities, such as, Beeswax, Bags and Bagging, Green hides, Nitrate of Soda, and Tallow, interior points have been given the same rate eastbound as from Pacific Coast terminals.

In the former westbound tariffs there were a larger number of commodity rates on non-sea-going articles that were lower to Pacific Coast terminals than to intermediate or interior points. These were readjusted by advancing the terminal rates to a figure that was reasonable for the service performed. This did not increase the rates on these commodities at interior points, but in most cases lowered them.

Rates that are lower to terminal points than to interior points have been forced by sea competition. But rates on such articles as do not move by sea, such as buggies, agricultural implements, furniture, tin cans, etc., that under the former tariff were lower to terminal than to interior points, were not defensible as sea-forced rates. Hence, the carriers were compelled to make rates on these commodities that would be no lower to terminal points than to interior points.

It is not intended to imply that these articles cannot be shipped by sea but that generally speaking they are not, when rail transportation is at hand. To pack or prepare them for sea shipment is very expensive, besides, the rate by sea on such bulky and light freight is high as compared with freight of greater density.

A large number of carload and less than carload commodities were eliminated because of their non-use, hence such action did not increase the rate or charge. Some few commodity rates were advanced because the general readjustment of rates in the intermountain and western territory made it necessary.

After going thoroughly over the tariffs applying to and from interior points and also to and from terminal points—both class and commodity rates—I consider that the re-adjustment is the best that could be arrived at for both the shipper and the carrier, taking into consideration the law which largely controls adjustment of rates as well as the rates themselves.

The commodity rates on less than carloads that have been eliminated in both east and west bound tariffs have been relegated to the classification and class rates, but if such articles are not moving in less than carloads, then no harm has been done.

OVERHEARD ON THE STREET

The Sort of Conversation That Occurs Between Two Dear Friends of the Feminine Persuasion.

The two dear, dear friends had not met in a long time, and when they at last encountered each other on the avenue they both began to talk simultaneously, as follows:

First Lady—How perfectly jolly to see you again! It seems ages since we met. But after all it's not so strange, because, you know, dear, I've been traveling all winter. We spent December in Italy, and about the first of January we went over to Egypt, where we passed two perfectly delightful months, going to the Riviera in March. We came back to America about April 10th, and went immediately down to Aiken, where George got in a lot of golf, and I just reveled in the horseback riding. Later on we came north again, and ever since I have been resting up at mother's up in the Berkshires. April is a trifle early for that part of the world, but everything was so quiet, and I was so tired from the constant travel, that it was refreshing to the last degree up there.

Second Lady—Why, you dear thing! I haven't seen you for a month of Sundays—but that wasn't your fault. I have had such a miserable winter—have hardly been out of the house a minute. I very foolishly managed to catch the whooping-cough from Tommy shortly after Christmas, and after I got through with that the baby came down with the measles, and again I was laid up, catching that infantile disease myself, with the result that when March came along and I was able to go out I was so run down that I caught a terrible cold, which developed into something very like pneumonia, and until a week ago last Thursday I spent most of my time in the hands of two doctors and a trained nurse.

(Pause for a long breath.)

First Lady (resuming)—And how have you been all winter?

Second Lady (simultaneously resuming)—And where have you been all this time—wintering in town?—Harper's Weekly.

Origin of "Hoosier."

When the Indiana Society of Chicago held its annual outing and feed June 1, Charles Healy told a new version of how the term "Hoosier" came to be applied to Indianians.

"An old river pilot gave me the story," said Mr. Healy, "and it sounds pretty reasonable. In the early days when Indiana was only sparsely settled along the southern border, most of the trading was done in the Kentucky towns just across the river. Naturally, when the settlers went to town they cut up all sorts of capers and one of the new stunts in those days was for a man to jump up in the air and try to kick his heels together twice before touching the ground.

"One day a crowd of Indiana settlers arrived in town, and some one offered to bet that a member of the Indiana crowd couldn't kick his heels together twice and say 'Hussar' two times before coming down. He performed the stunt all right, with the exception of saying 'Hussar.' In his excitement he mispronounced the word and said 'Hoosier, Hoosier.' That's how the famous nickname originated, according to the river pilot, and from that time on all Indiana people were called 'Hoosiers.'"

Tips as Strike Breakers.

Not a few men who are accustomed to give liberal tips were heard to express themselves bitterly on the subject of the waiters' strike.

One of the managers at the Waldorf was talking yesterday about hearing one of the best-known brokers in New York, known as one of the most generous tippers about the hotel, declare emphatically that he had vowed never again to tip a waiter who had struck. Some doubt was expressed, and the manager rushed away and brought up the broker.

"Yes, I said it," the latter agreed, "and, furthermore, I mean it. In the course of the last twenty years I have given away thousands of dollars in tips to waiters—never less than a quarter, and sometimes as much as $5 at a time. Yet what did it count for me to spend a lot of money on men just for bringing me a few plates of food? Hereafter I shall ask every man who serves me whether he was a striker. If he was, I shall not give him a cent, and I can tell you I have talked with hundreds who feel just the same as I."—New York Sun.

Babism.

Babism was founded in Persia about 1846, by Sayid Mirza Ali. He took the name of Beb-ed-din (the gate of the faith), whence he became known as the "Bab," and his disciples as the "Babis." The Bab, who during his life maintained the highest reputation for purity and gentleness of character, was murdered at Tabriz, July 8, 1850. It will be impossible to give here anything like an intelligent account of the teachings of Babism. Intensely mystical, it takes an Oriental of the Orientals to even approximately understand it, or to even half-way explain it. The Babis have teachers in this country, and you might consult them if you have a desire to know what the cult is.

HAPPENINGS IN THE CITIES

Tiny Shop Spikes Wheel of Commerce

CHICAGO.—"The march of commerce" from time to time has pursued divers courses to obviate a halt, or the semblance of a halt, but it has fallen to the lot of one of Chicago's large wholesale concerns to employ, probably for the first time, a course which is marching around, under and over the threatening obstacle.

The obstacle encountered by expanding commerce in this instance is the person of John F. Walsh and his little hardware store, located midway between North Canal street and the Chicago river, on the south side of West Lake street.

As a simon-pure adherent to standpatism John Walsh has completely eclipsed the late originator of that term.

Now, John Walsh is not clinging to the policies of any particular political coterie, but is standing pat firmly in his little shop, which is a lone remaining section of a once fairly large building.

His legal or moral right to stand firm on the privileges of his five-year lease of the 25x40 foot shop is disputed by no one, although a mammoth building now in the course of construction must have the few feet occupied by Walsh's shop if the northern face of the structure, when completed, is to present an unbroken front.

"Perhaps they thought I would take an afternoon off, tie my lease up with pretty pink ribbon and carry it over to them on a silver tray, decorated with American Beauty roses."

"Well, you see how badly they were mistaken. I'll have no truck with them. I'm here to stick. I've my lease and it runs for trhree years yet."

The entire area, bounded by West Randolph, North Canal and West Lake streets, and one of the present buildings of the concern, with the exception of Walsh's little store, was in readiness for the construction work to be begun. And Walsh steadfastly ignored all arguments.

As a last expedient, the unique plan of allowing the new structure to rear its steel girders over the very roof of the little store, excavating the basement, and erecting walls on three sides, was resorted to.

Now Walsh is being builded around on all sides, top and bottom, except the front, which will remain his very own, free and unchallenged, until the expiration of the lease, and "the march of commerce" goes on unhalted.

Poodle Cause of Death and Arrests

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—One little white French poodle attacked a Minneapolis policeman the other night. The policeman shot the poodle. The poodle's mistress attacked the policeman. A riot call was put in for the police.

When the din of battle subsided, the poodle's mistress and one man were under arrest for disorderly conduct, and the poodle lay dead in the street and the policeman was fleeing under cover of darkness to his home and a whole pair of trousers.

The poodle, cause of all the trouble, was "Snoozlums," pet of Mrs. Bertha Forslund. The policeman who was attacked and who shot "Snoozlums" was Police Driver David Melbouff, and the man whose championship of the poodle resulted in his own arrest gave the name of Robert Bonsman at central station.

Policeman Melbouff, who is driver at the South Side station, was riding home on a bicycle at 10 p. m. According to his story the poodle ran from the walk and seized him by the leg of the trousers.

It was at this stage of the conflict, according to Policeman Melbouff, when he was complete master of the field, that Mrs. Forslund appeared on the scene.

"You have killed my pet. You have killed my baby, 'Snoozlums,'" the woman is said to have shrieked as she stepped over the body of the fallen poodle and toward the policeman, who, busy with the trousers which had been torn, was somewhat at a disadvantage.

"I didn't want to hit the woman," said Policeman Melbouff, "so I just held her off."

About this time, according to Melbouff, Robert Bronsman took a hand in the fray. This made things easier for Melbouff for Bronsman was not a woman. The battle raged merrily.

In the meantime neighbors, hearing the barks of "Snoozlums," the shot, the screams of the woman, had turned in riot calls for the police.

Leaving "Snoozlums" where he lay in the street the police took the man and woman in the patrol wagon and to central station, where charges of disorderly conduct were placed against both.

Uncle Tom Bloodhounds Are Eaters

ST. LOUIS.—Four large hounds, possessed of appetites commensurate with their size, are perplexing William U. Halbert, of Belleville, public administrator of St. Clair county, Illinois. The dogs formerly belonged to an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" show owned by E. C. Chunn, who died in East St. Louis several months ago, and Halbert says they rapidly are eating up all that is left of the estate.

The hounds, each one of which stands a few hands shorter than a small pony, came by their appetites honestly, it would seem. For years they chased the elusive Eliza across the papier mache ice, always just a trifle too far behind to sink their teeth in the persecuted young woman. After the show was closed they cried for Eliza for a while, but later signified they would be satisfied with plain, ordinary beef, or something better.

When Halbert first came into possession of the dogs the rest of the estate of the one-time owner of the show was intact, and he even could afford to buy porterhouse for the animals if they insisted on having it. Halbert hadn't had charge of the estate long, however, when the dead owner's father, J. C. Chunn, filed a claim for the personal effects of his son. These personal effects consisted of a passenger coach and scenery and other paraphernalia necessary to the show.

Halbert fought the giving up of the passenger coach with the idea that if the worst came to the worst he could house the hounds in it and ship them from place to place that they might "board around" on their relatives. He lost the suit, however, and found himself the mortified possessor of the dogs, which, after the manner of their kind, lost no time in signifying they would be pleased to sit down to a good meal.

So far they have cost him more than $100, and none of them has indicated he is ready to get old and die or quit eating just because the novelty has worn off.

Frisco Laborers Find a Wine Cellar

SAN FRANCISCO.—That men may drink champagne on a steam beer salary has received convincing proof. Around the ruins of the Grand Hotel at Stevenson and New Montgomery streets were a lot of $2-a-day laborers the other day who were nursing assorted "heads," but who were very happy just the same.

During the work of clearing the ruins an old rock crusher that stood on the lot was toppled over under the instructions of the foreman. The foreman, the day being hot, then adjourned to a nearby buffet to quench his thirst. When he returned to the field he found that every man jack of his laborers had disappeared.

Their coats were still hanging around on fences and the foreman was puzzled, not having reason to believe there had been a walk-out, until the sound of popping corks, coming from the near distance, mingled with gusty laughter, attracted his attention to where the rock crusher had stood.

He hurried over there to discover his entire crew sitting around the floor of the wine cellar that had been exposed, drinking the cream of the choice stock of liquors that had made the old Grand hotel bar famous.

After the wreck of the hotel in 1906 no one gave a thought to the wine cellar and the stock of old wines, assuming that the stock had been ruined.

Colonel Kirkpatrick of the Palace, when advised of the find and asked what disposition he wanted made of the wines, said:

"Let the laborers dispose of it. The wine is theirs by right of discovery."

MONKS DINED WITH HERETIC

Members of Catholic Brotherhood All Unwittingly Entertained the Famous Pere Hyacinthe.

Monsieur Nathan, the Jewish mayor of Rome, has just placed in the capitol the bronze mask of Pere Hyacinthe Loyson, offered to the Eternal City by the son of the great preacher. Several times following his rupture with the church Pere Hyacinthe returned to spend the winter at Rome in company with his American wife. During one of his latest sojourns there he yielded to a sweet mystification which made some stir in the Catholic brotherhoods.

It was in a warm autumn morning and the former friar, who was a great walker, with others took as the end of his excursion the little hut of the "Three Fountains," hidden in the eucalyptus of which the monks make an elixir as delightful as chartreuse. The visit ended and the tourists departed for Rome. Our pilgrim noticed that the hour was late. Pressed by hunger he asked to dine at the convent. His smooth face, his Roman facial expression, his ecclesiastical dress, his bishoplike air, provoked the brothers to a respectful attention. For this mysterious unknown, whose incognito doubtless hid some high dignitary of the church, they selected a private dining room and "put the little dishes in the big ones." Several Trappists, dedicated to their vows to seclusion, begged the honor of serving him at table, and after the priest had pronounced the blessing the father of the convent himself wished to share the love feast.

While knife and fork were at work, there was some conversation:

"Of what diocese are you, my father?"

"Of the diocese of the Gallican church."

"But of what city?"

"In partibus infidelium" (in heathen parts), says Pere Hyacinthe.

The hosts then allowed themselves to let slip some confidences. They even criticised the state of the holy mother church and spoke of "Pere Hyacinthe" not without blame, but with some sympathy. After a little glass of eucalyptine the guest made a sign to the father of the convent that he desired to speak to him alone. After the brothers had withdrawn from the room, he said: "I am indebted to you for an excellent collation and an hour of reminiscence. Accept this for your charity box. I am Pere Hyacinthe." The good father jumped back, hiding his face in his hands. Then, spontaneously, he pressed the hands of the heretic.

And now Pere Hyacinthe has returned to Rome. Only according to his former co-religionists he has mistaken the route. In place of taking the road to the vatican he has taken that to the capitol.—Le Cri de Paris.

Royalty on the Maps.

Now that the Princess Patricia has given her name to the new district of Ontario, it may be said that the members of the sovereign families of Britain during the last three centuries figure handsomely in the gazetteers of the world.

Maryland was named in honor of Henrietta Maria, whose husband granted it to George Calvert, first Lord Baltimore, and his heirs forever. The Carolinas are named after Charles II., While Georgia was named in honor of George II., in whose reign it was colonized. An island was named after Princess Patricia's great-great-grandmother, the good Queen Charlotte, while even the memory of that rather colorless lady, the wife of William IV., is immortalized in the capital of South Australia.

To come down to our own day and generation, it is hardly necessary to recall that the grandparents of Princess Patricia, Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, are lavishly commemorated on the maps, or that her uncle, the late King Edward, is commemorated, among other parts of the world, in Antarctic lands. Probably no nonroyal personage recently living is so well assured of this form of immortality as the late Cecil Rhodes.

How It Felt.

Dr. Joseph Eisenstaedt told the following story at a banquet given to Chicago physicians: Since the dentists love to have their fun at the expense of the physicians I take pleasure in returning the compliment with this story. An Irish maid who was in the service of a well to do Chicago home asked for an extra afternoon off. When her mistress asked why, she explained that she had to go to the dentist.

"When she came home her mistress asked: 'Well, Bridget, how did you have your tooth filled?'

"'I don't know,' was the maid's reply.

"Her mistress continued: 'Well, did he fill it with silver or amalgam?'

"'I don't know how it was mum,' was Bridget's bland reply, 'but from the way it felt I should think it was thunder and lightning, mum.'"

Savings Deposits in Street Boxes.

The Hermes Exchange Savings bank of Budapest has placed automatic collecting devices in the streets. The idea of these boxes is that people can drop money in at any time and receive in exchange a receipt for the amount deposited. Upon presenting the slips which the machine hands out to the officials of the bank in question the bank book of the person is credited with the deposit. The purpose of the device is to encourage the possessor of spare change to deposit it in the bank while he is in a thrifty frame of mind.

CONTROL OF INJURIOUS PEAR SLUG IS DIFFICULT PROBLEM

Hellebore, Lead Arsenate and Paris Green Among Least Expensive of Sprays for Eradication of Pest Which Common in Several States in Central Part of Country.

(By R. L. WEBSTER.)

Nearly every year cherry and plum trees in the central states suffer a large amount of damage on account of the common pear slug, or cherry slug. While the control of this insect has not been considered a very difficult problem, yet it often happens that foliage is greatly damaged before the owner is aware that any slugs are on his trees.

The pear slug, or cherry slug, is a dark, almost black, slimy slug, about two-fifths of an inch long when full grown, which feeds on cherry, pear and plum leaves.

These slugs feed on the upper sides of the leaves, eating out all the tissue except the veins and the lower surface. The injured leaves become dry and brown and fall from the trees, which are sometimes left entirely bare of foliage in midsummer.

Trees are often killed as a result of repeated defoliation. A short crop of fruit follows a severe attack by this insect, on account of the weakened condition of the tree.

The Pear Slug.

Trees that have been damaged by the slugs appear as if they had been damaged by fire. The leaves turn brown, curl up and finally fall. Cherry trees, under such conditions, are forced to put out a new growth of leaves, weakening the tree and reducing the crop of fruit the following year.

The slugs appear twice during the year, and trees should be sprayed as soon as they appear. They first make their appearance about the middle of June, and the second appearance is about the third week in July.

Insect powder can be used against these slugs by merely dusting it over the leaves.

Hellebore may be used either in a dry or liquid form. It must be fresh for effective use. For a dry application use hellebore, one pound to five pounds of air-slaked lime. For a liquid application use it one pound to a barrel of water.

Angouleme Pear.

Lead arsenate (prepared), two pounds in 50 gallons of water, is effective.

Paris green, one pound in 150 gallons of water, is also effective. Some quicklime, about a pound to each 50 gallons of water, should be added to the spray, to prevent burning of the leaves.

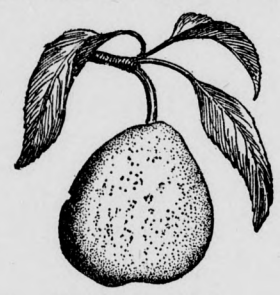
Kerosene emulsion—kerosene, two gallons; hard soap, one-half pound; water, one gallon—is good. The soap is dissolved by boiling in water and is then churned up with the kerosene until the two are emulsified into a white, creamy mixture. The stock solution is then diluted with water, while still warm, to the required amount. To obtain a ten per cent. solution one part of the stock solution, prepared as stated, should be diluted with 6 2-3 parts of water.

Whale oil soap, one pound to two gallons of water; white laundry soap and Ivory soap, one ten-ounce bar to two gallons of water, have proven effective. The soap is merely dissolved in water by boiling, and sprayed while still warm.

Hellebore, lead arsenate and paris green are the least expensive of these treatments. If a spraying is necessary while there is fruit on the trees, hellebore or some other material than arsenical should be used.

Cultivation under infested trees is of value, since it disturbs the cocoons in the soil there.

Since the slugs spend the greater part of the year in the ground under the trees infested in the summer it follows that a thorough stirring of the soil would tend to break up the cocoons containing the slugs, and so expose them to the elements. Berlese has suggested this measure against this insect in Italy. This cultivation would be most effective in the fall so that the cocoons might be exposed during the winter. Spring cultivation would also be of value in disturbing the cocoons.



Easter Beurre Pear.

According to Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the bureau of entomology at Washington, the slugs may be easily washed off of small trees by a strong stream of water applied from a garden hose under heavy pressure. When washed to the ground they are unable to regain their places on the leaves. Such a measure as this would be quite feasible on a small scale in cities, or where water pressure is available.

Spraying is undoubtedly the best remedy for the pear slug. Of the two generations the first is the harder to combat, especially on cherry trees, since the fruit is present on the trees at about the same time that the slugs are abundant. Consequently due care must be taken in the use of arsenical poisons at that time. Arsenical poisons may be used freely for the second generation in the late summer.

The pear slug is rarely destructive in any locality for many years at a time. This alternating abundance and scarcity of the insect is due for the most part to the activity of its natural enemies, the most abundant of which are two small egg parasites.

TEACH COLT TO BE HALTER-WISE

Young Horses Should Be Taken in Hand When Little Fellows and Quite Easily Handled.

(By M. COVERDELL.)

You often see a man kick and cuff the colt around every time it happens to get in the way.

After a while you will notice this same fellow with the family out helping him to hem up a two-year-old colt while he can put a halter on him.

And for the first two or three times they get the halter on they have a regular circus in teaching the animal to lead and be halter-wise. It's mighty hard and dangerous work, too, this breaking in big, strong, two-year-old colts.

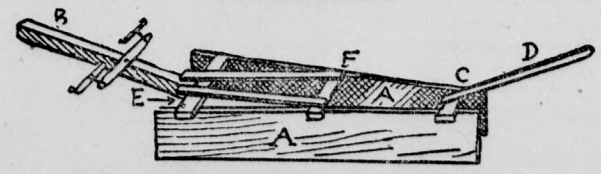
Why not take the little fellows in hand when they are small, easily handled and quick to learn? Slip the halter on the colt occasionally. By slow degrees get it accustomed to leading up when the lead-strap is tightened and you move.

But don't get in a hurry. The colt has been used to going aheal of you so don't expect it to follow too soon. A lump of sugar or a few oats held in the hand just in front of the little fellow are much better trainers in teaching it to lead than dragging it by the lead strap and having someone behind it with a club or a fishing pole to "shoo" it along.

Vegetables in China.

In China the natives preserve vegetables by coating them with salt and drying them in the sun. Hams are cured by means of an alkaline earth and common salt. Pickled eggs are preserved with a compound of common mud, salt, saltpeter and soy bean sauce.

COVERING AND RIDGING POTATO



An implement for covering and ridging potatoes is shown in the illustration. The runners, A, A, are of hard wood, 6 feet long, six inches high and 2 inches thick, with iron plates on bottom. Front crosspiece E is 3 feet long and rear crosspiece C is 1 foot. One man drives while another holds rear end in place by the handle D. The device is handy and inexpensive.

The Coughs of Children

They may not cough today, but what about tomorrow? Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. This cough medicine is especially good for children. No anodynes. No alcohol.

Many a child is called dull and stupid when the whole trouble is due to a lazy liver. We firmly believe your own doctor will tell you that an occasional dose of Ayer's Pills, sugar-coated, will do such children a great deal of good. Ask him.

Duel Has Happy Ending.

At Edinburgh two Italians met at midnight to settle a dispute. Having but one pistol, they drew lots to see which one should shoot first. The winner fired and missed, and then politely handed over the pistol to his adversary. The second shot likewise proving abortive, the bloodthirsty combatants fell upon each other's necks, then quit the field arm in arm.

Simple Diet the Best.

The fewer foods we eat together at a single meal the better, from the health standpoint; of that there can be no reasonable doubt. The poor man who can afford but a few simple dishes is far better off, in reality, than the rich man with his extensive "course dinners"—as many millionaires have found out when they are reducing to living on milk for a while.

Agricultural subjects are taught in all Hungarian schools and there are seven experiment stations attached to colleges.

ENJOY WHIRL OF LIFE

STRANGE FASCINATION EXERCISED BY GREAT CITY.

Bowery Lodging House Dwellers Find the Excitement There That Previously Has Been Denied Them—The Situation.

The other day a ruddy-faced, clear-eyed man was discovered at the corner of Twenty-third street and Broadway, carrying the banner of a cheap restaurant, according to a New York letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star. There was nothing of the downtrodden and forlorn about him. He watched the panorama which unfolded before him with wide eyes, interested in every detail as a child might be in a new toy.

"I can get you a better job than this," said a man who was interested in him, at first sight. "I can find you a place where you can make $12 a week, and the work is not hard."

"I don't want it," said the old man, promptly. "I'm having the best time of my life right now."

He had been a farmer all his life. For years he had struggled with a hillside farm in Vermont. His one recreation was to read a city paper. By and by his four sons grew up, left the farm, and have been modestly successful.

"When my wife died I came to the city," said he. "My boys send me $5 a week and I make enough more by odd jobs of this sort to keep me. And, say! I'm living for the first time in my life! I'm enjoying myself, I tell you. There's a man living down at the lodging house where I get a 25-cent room every night who used to be a bank burglar, and he tells me the stories of his life. And there's a fellow who says he's a count—he talks like one, anyhow—and there's a major in the English army, and a sea captain and a professor who got fired by his university—they say for cheating at cards—and a man they say used to be a minister and killed a man. Every night fellows like that come in and there's always something happening. It's exciting—and I spent all my life hard at work on a hill farm. I'm twenty years younger than I was when I came to town and as long as I get a couple of meals a day and a place to sleep, I'm happy. What do I want with a $12-a-week job, Mister? I wouldn't change places with the mayor."

A city missionary heard the story.

"That is why you cannot reform a man who has tasted life in a lodging house," said he. "Excitement is in the air. Every newcomer has a life history that is more interesting than fiction. Little wonder they will not 'come back.'"

The Net Results.

When Ollie James, new junior United States senator from Kentucky, first broke into politics in his native county of Crittenden he had occasion to try a case before a rural magistrate. When the trial was ended the magistrate invited the young lawyer to go home to dinner with him. As they sat down at the table the old man said:

"Ollie, it pains me mightily to see you messin' in with politics."

"Why so?" inquired James.

"Ollie, my son," said the magistrate, "politics ain't a fittin' pursuit for any young man. Look at me! I started in politics when I was young and hopeful, just like you are now. I have held all the positions of trust in the gift of the people of my home district—I have been school trustee, road supervisor and constable and justice of the peace. But now, an old man, all I've got to show for my years of ceaseless political activities is a lot of warm enemies and cold friends."—Saturday Evening Post.

Believes Everything Father Says.

Park S. Florea, national secretary of the Adscript club, has a little son, Edward, who believes everything his father says, whether it is said seriously or jokingly. Once when warning his son to keep away from the heels of a cow, Mr. Florea told the boy a cow can kick a mile, at least that is what Edwards says.

The boy is visiting relatives near Harrisburg, Ind. While at play he saw a cow, fully a mile away, and he ran and hid in the haymow, according to a story told at Connersville. The boy said his papa, who was reared on a farm, had told him there was no limit to the reach of a cow's kick, and that he thought it would be safer to hide while one was in sight. It was with difficulty the boy was convinced that his father merely wanted him to keep out of the cow's reach.—Indianapolis News.

The Childless Apartment.

Bliffkins and his wife live in one of these fashionable, childless apartment houses. The visiting friend speaks.

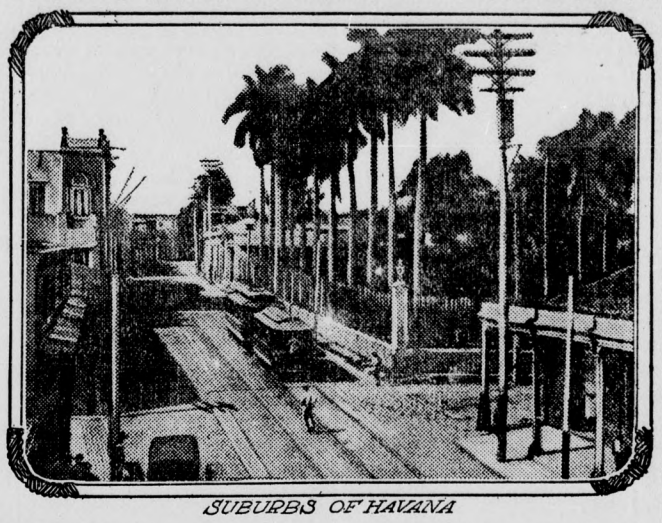
"Say, what became of that pretty bull terrier you used to have around to keep Mrs. Bliffkins company during the day?"

"The management wouldn't stand for it, so we gave him away. We ventured a canary, but they kicked on that. I suggested some goldfish, but Mrs. Bliffkins said they reminded her of swimming snakes."

"How'd you finally agree?"

"Excellently. I bought her one of these Mexican jumping beans. It's cute as it can be. Say, Clara get our little Pedro and make him do some of his stunts."

KEEPING COOL IN HAVANA



SUBURBS OF HAVANA

WHILE the newer Havana hotels seem Americanized the older are true to their Spanish origin. I think of one in particular. It is in the heart of the lower city—away from the fashionable Prado. Instead of making every inch pay in small rooms and corridors, it is built around a spacious patio, or central hall, running up two or three stories and buttressed with massive pillars. The corridors are merely balconies carried around the four sides of the patio on each floor. Instead of glaring white walls here are wainscots of Spanish tiles in delicately modulated yellow and blues, writes a correspondent of the Outlook.

The American legation has long been housed in an edifice with such a noble court; but now that the legation must be moved, there is difficulty in getting in a new building, as dignified and appropriate architecture, no matter how great the advantage of modern conveniences, and more appropriate location. Our consulate is well lodged on the top floor of the new Bank of Cuba building. But, though such a modern place is efficient in labor saving, as one looks at the homely stories superimposed on the really fine facade of the lower stories the effect is only one of an architectural aberration.

In this hot place much attention is necessarily given to cooling off. The tiled floor of your room helps to that end. The room itself, with a ceiling twenty feet high, helps. Of course a bath helps, and the best hotel I know advertises "every room with a bath." Even a cigar—albeit a hot and not a cold thing—helps, one reason being, I fancy, that it costs about half as much as in the United States. But, most of all, a pina fria helps—a pineappleade, to coin a word. There are other seductive drinks; for instance, orchata (milk of almonds) and naranjada (orangeade). But the pina fria caps the climax.

Cheap Transit.

Another way to cool off is to drive, or even better to take one of the trams go to the end of the line, and come back. As few lines are double through the same streets the journey presents the greater interest, going out through one set of streets and returning by another. The tram system offers surprisingly quick and cheap transit to most of Havana and its suburbs. For instance, you go from Jesus del Monte, the highest point south of Havana, through the city Vedada, the fashionable resort of the sea, a distance of some ten miles, for 5 cents. And at Vedada there are suburban residences worth seeing. They are often embowered in gorgeously flowering vines, even better worth seeing.

The harbor unites the strenuous with the serene. Unloading and loading means a lot of labor. And yet the labor seems to go on unnervously, perhaps because of the tropical climate, which discourages overexertion.

Alongside there is one of the good old buildings characteristic of Cuba or Spain, well adapted to a southern climate, with dignified proportions, with two high ceilinged floors, with balconies and broad windows. The building is painted a cool gray.

A little further along the new Havana jostles the old in the shape of a structure several times as large, with at least three times as many floors, not as high between joints, and with narrower windows, some arranged in groups of two or three and with hot looking mahogany colored shades, the building itself being painted a warm olive.

Furthermore, instead of the usual flat roof, appropriate to the tropics, this particular roof is surmounted by a red dome over which sways a gilt and doubtless disgusted Diana. Now there are reds and reds. And some may be a grateful color feature even in the South.

For instance, take the soft reds of the tiled roofs of the dock sheds, or the marvellous reds, as time has developed them, splashy and well-nigh iridescent, over there on the long Cabana wall, a fascinating old wall in any light, and, like the hills along the Nile, apparently preserving sunset colors at noonday.

Sailors Are Spanish.

"Are you a Cuban?" I asked of the sailor who was taking me about Havana harbor.

He answered my question with another: "Can a Cuban sail a boat?"

Then he added, "No, senor; we have to come over her from Spain to sail the Cubans' boats for them. And there are many of us in Cuba for that and for other labors—more than a hundred thousand. Some come from Galicia, where I come from; some from the Canary islands."

All this is Castilian Spanish. I had suspected as much. Looking more closely at the sailor I saw that his lean face resembled those of the north of Spain. There are, as he said, very many Spaniards still in Cuba—and, for their benefit to boating hereabouts, it is not to be regretted.

Every day about noon a breeze springs up here, it cools you a bit after the great heat of the city—much too hot for most northerners—and you sit for a long time in your sailboat, tacking about the two and a half mile wide inner harbor.

Then you sail back to Havana, and opposite the landing place enter a quaint restaurant. Mounting to the second story esplanade, you order your fish in a paper bag and other sea delicacies, and then, looking out from amid the potted shrubs, settle down to the enjoyment of a new view of the harbor.

In it are craft of all sorts—from trans-Atlantic steamers and the great Standard Oil boats to the coastal steamers and freighters, the harbor lighters, the motor boats and yachts, the sailboats and rowboats with that fascinating cover over the aft part, like the craft on the Italian lakes, to keep off the southern sun from the too sensitive voyager.

Of course, the negro element is strong in Cuba, and summer evenings their quarters are redolent with the thrum of mandolins and guitars. Juliets occupy balconies in rickety two-story frame buildings with flowers all about—for they're great flower lovers, these people—and Romeo, in his Sunday suit, comes meandering down below, thrumming "La Paloma."

The hot countries and clothing have hardly gone hand in hand, except in fiesta time, and in the little courtyards the youngsters run about even as Nature made them.

GETTING RID OF THE BORE

Really Clever Scheme This, on Which It May Be Mentioned, There Is No Patent.

The new boarder's first request was for a bracket to be placed on the wall against the telephone. The bracket being provided, the boarder installed thereon a clock of powerful tone. One morning just after the clock had struck 10 she was called to the telephone. After a short conversation the clock struck 11. In the afternoon of the same day, the new boarder being again at the telephone, that whimsical clock struck 4 about ten minutes after 3. The landlady observed that the boarder's clock must be crazy.

"Oh, dear, no," said the boarder. "It is I, not the clock. I turned the hands and made it strike. It is the only way I can get rid of tiresome acquaintances. They talk and talk about nothing, and I just can't shut them off. But when that clock strikes right up against the telephone they see a light.

"'Was that a clock striking?' they ask.

"I say it was. 'Time will fly, you know.' Then they take the hint and ring off. Really, considering all the telephone bores I know, I don't see how I could manage without that clock."

Good Old Times.

"Now, old man, make yourself comfortable and let's talk over the good old times. We haven't seen each other since we were boys together. I told you I was married, didn't I? By the way, did you ever live in Painesville?"

"Yes. I lived there three years."

"Ever meet Miss Katish?"

"Ha! Ha! Why, I was engaged to her! But that's nothing—all the fellows in my crowd were engaged to her at one time or another. I see you've lived in Painesville. Why did you ask about her in particular? Come—confess!"

"Why, I—er—I married her."

Two of Diverse Opinions.

Under the headline, "Many Men of Many Minds," a Paris paper refers to the last wills of two of its citizens. One Pere Hyacinthe Loyson requested that ministers of the various faiths attend his funeral, and that they appear at that function in their clerical robes. The other Parisian said: "I want no priest to say the usual things at my funeral, which must not take place in a church, but if a priest wishes to speak on that occasion in the garb of a citizen and without any church insignia, let it be done."

The Key.

"And where," my fellow citizens," appealed the political speaker, "can we find an instrument so fit, so delicate, so adjustable, and at the same time so unassuming and popular that it will unlock every department of state for the benefit of the people?" "The hairpin!" shrieked an enthusiastic suffragette in the audience.—Judge.

Gave Name to All.

"The Bridge of the Seas" is the striking name which Pindar gives to the narrow isthmus which separates the Gulf of Corinth from the Aegean sea. It is one of the most interesting strips of soil on the five continents. It is the isthmus of all the world; for from its Greek name Isthmia, every other isthmus has been named.

The car smashed into a bedroom, where a man, his wife and child were sleeping. They were showered with plaster and broken glass from the window, but were uninjured.

The Danish Plan.

In Denmark, as in other countries, they are troubled with men born tired, men who are "snow-shovelers in summer and haymakers in winter." Denmark takes them firmly but kindly and puts them to bed. In bed it keeps them as long as may be necessary. Four days are, as a rule, sufficient for the most obdurate cases. At the end of that time the idler is found to be feverish for work.

Plague of Snails.

A plague of snails is reported from the island of Ceylon, part of which is overrun by the animals. All vegetation is devoured as soon as it appears, and the natives have found it necessary to co-operate against them. Trenches are dug to stay their progress, and they are kept from the trees by making a circle on the ground around the trunks of cork or fiber, impregnated with tar or pitch.

Trunk Linings.

Little bags of lavender in the compartments of trunks that must stand for any length of time, sweeten wonderfully the air that is so apt to grow musty. If trunk linings are slightly scented in this way dresses and underwear are more daintily fragrant at the end of the journey than when one folds a sachet among the garments themselves.

THERE is no subject of public interest which is of more vital concern for the welfare of the next generation than that of the conservation by the state and nation of our natural resources. There has in the past been great waste in lumbering and mining and almost criminal indifference to the rights of the people in permitting big corporations to obtain control of some of the most valuable sources of water power. The only way of preventing great hardships to future generations as a result of this continued wastefullness is by the education of our children in the public schools, and the public generally, along the line of conservation.

Superintendent of Public Instruction, Edward Hyatt in discussing this subject recently spoke of the great good that might be accomplished in this line by moving pictures. So much interest was aroused in the subject that many moving picture companies asked him for ideas as to what kind of pictures would serve the purpose. Supt. Hyatt's idea is that a series of pictures be produced showing the old wasteful methods of logging together with the proper way; the effect of forest fires, their origin and means taken for prevention. Scenes showing the effect of dredger mining, the process of reclaiming overflowed lands, and the great sources of water power together with examples of their usefulness to the public would, he believes, be of great educational value.

There is no doubt that moving pictures are becoming a great educational factor. Such pictures as Superintendent Hyatt mentions would do much toward awakening the public to the absolute necessity for conserving our invaluable natural resources.—Sonoma Co. Herald.

H. U. MUDGE, president of the Rock Island Railroad, in a recent address, undertook to estimate a man's commercial value from his earning capacity. He figured a man earning $83.33 per month, for instance, or $1,000 a year, had a capitalized value of $25,000. The salary he rated as interest at 4 per cent.

In speaking to the employees of the company, Mr. Mudge said:

"You can make yourself worth more, while a locomotive can not. You can direct your own energies, while a locomotive must be directed by a driver. It rests with you to raise your own capitalization to $500,000. Therefore be careful about your food, treat your body decently, and above all, feed your mind. You are working for a large corporation. In the nature of things it cannot know you very well personally, but it knows you by the work you turn out. It sets a real value on your work, higher than you think. Your value is measured by the quality and quantity of results you produce. Somebody knows your actual worth, appreciates your honest endeavors, and has you in mind for better things. It is a business proposition. Each of us is capitalized."—San Francisco Call.

Millions Filched from People by Mail Swindles

Washington.—One hundred and twenty million dollars was filched from the American people during the last fiscal year by swindlers who operated largely through the mails, according to a statement just made in a formal report to Postmaster-General Hitchcock. This was an increase of approximately $50,000,000 in the aggregate of the previous year.

Of those who are alleged to have operated the fraudulent schemes 1063 were arrested by postoffice inspectors.

During the year which ended June 30th last 452 persons were convicted and sentenced and 571 cases are awaiting final disposition. Postmaster-General Hitchcock's order to inspectors to collect evidence that would warrant criminal prosecution of the swindlers gradually is building a wall of protection against such frauds around the American people. Before that the punishment was only a fraud order forbidding the delivery of mail to such operators.

The report says that these fraud manipulators, who usually exploit bogus mines, fake remedies and worthless lands, constitute a distinct class of law breakers. Among the wealthy offenders who have been caught by the inspectors are criminals who have posed as respectable citizens, leaders in their communities and personages in the highest social and business fields, some of them millionaires enriched by their plunder. Some of these men now are serving prison sentences.

To Purchase Stock

The Los Gatos Gas & Electric Company and the Pacific Gas & Electric Company have applied to the Railroad Commission for approval of a contract under which the former undertakes to sell its property to the latter for $187,762.51.

The Coast Counties Gas & Electric Company has applied to the Railroad Commission for permission to purchase the capital stock of the Gilroy Gas Works. The price given is $25,000. The Gilroy Gas Works is the assignee of the lease of the municipal plant in Gilroy.

Interesting Events

Entries for two of the events in the County Fair to be held September 5-15 here, will be closed on August 15. They are the Egg-laying contest, in which pens of four hens and one rooster will compete and the potato contest for children of the Santa Clara County schools.

Entries for the egg-laying contest are limited to thirty, the pen which produces the most eggs between September 5 and 10 will win a prize of $25. There will be cash awards for second and third places. Much interest is being taken throughout the county in this feature of the fair, especially by owners of good layers and the entry list is nearly full.

Children from any scchool in the county may make entries of fifty pounds of potatoes in the potato show for youngsters. The management is offering $20, for the best box or sack of "spuds" so grown in this county.

State News

Jackson Hatch, twice convicted of embezzlement has been sentenced to seven years in San Quentin.

A high power auto crowded a loaded auto over an embankment Sunday. The five occupants were slightly injured.

The municipal plants of Palo Alto paid a total profit of $652.50 for the month of June. The water plant netted $303.99 and the power plant $348.51. Not so bad for one month.

A report comes from Stockton that a company has been organized and financed and a site has been obtained on the water front for a cannery with a capacity of a carload of baked beans daily. F. B. Nins, president of the Chamber of Commerce, is said to be president and general manager of the company and W. A. Lane, sales manager. The name of the concern will be the F. B. Nins Packing Company. The idea is to save the freight that is now paid on canned beans from the East and to supply Californians with their own product, as the tomatoes, pork and red peppers which go into canned beans are all raised in quantity in this State.

The California State Fair will be held this year September 14 to 21 inclusive, at Sacramento. The State Agricultural Society, which has adopted the slogan of "Each Year a Bigger and Better Fair" intends to live up to this motto, and is making preparations on a larger scale than ever before. The agricultural display will be especially comprehensive, and live stock, mineral and manufactured products will be adequately represented. The amusement features of the fair will also surpass those of previous years, according to the announcements.

The eastern opinion of California cantaloupes can be gathered from the following extract from a New York market report in the Fruit Trade Journal: "While California melons were in liberal supply and in strong demand at satisfactory prices, those from other sections were neglected at low figures. There was a good demand, but the trade wanted the best there was, so the California melons supplied requirements in most cases. Receipts from Georgia, North and South Carolina were light, but the trade did not seem to want them."
